

General Roman Calendar as in 1954

The rank of feasts determines which Mass is to be said when two feasts coincide (or "occur") on the one day, as well as when a feast falls on Sundays or certain other privileged days. Feasts were classified as Simple, Semidouble, or Double, with feasts of the Double Rite further divided into Double of the First Class, Double of the Second Class, Greater Double or Major Double, and Double, in order of descending rank. On many feasts of simple rank, the celebrant was permitted to substitute a Mass of his own choice such as a votive Mass, or a Mass for the Dead. When two feasts occurred on the same day, the lower-ranking feast became a commemoration.

Sundays were divided into three classes. Sundays of the first class were the first Sunday of Advent, the four Sundays of Lent, Passion Sunday, Palm Sunday, Easter Sunday, Low Sunday, and Pentecost. No feast whatsoever might be celebrated on these days. Sundays of the second class permitted the celebration of Doubles of the First Class only, and consisted of the other three Sundays in Advent and the three pre-Lenten Sundays. All other Sundays of the year formed the third class, and only the celebration of Doubles of the First or Second Class took precedence over the Sunday.

In addition to festal days and Sundays, there were also different ranks of ferias. Ferias of Advent and Lent took higher precedence, for example, as did Ember Days. Ember days are four separate sets of three days within the same week—specifically, the Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday—roughly equidistant in the circuit of the year, that were formerly set aside for fasting and prayer. These days set apart for special prayer and fasting were considered especially suitable for the ordination of clergy. The Ember Days were known in the medieval church as quatuor tempora (the "four seasons"), or jejunia quatuor temporum ("fasts of the four seasons"). The Ember Weeks—the weeks in which the Ember Days occur—are the week between the third and fourth Sundays of Advent, between the first and second Sundays of Lent, the week between Pentecost and Trinity Sunday, and the calendar week after Holy Cross Day (September 14) (the liturgical Third Week of September).

Rogation Days are, in the calendar of the Western Church, four days traditionally set apart for solemn processions to invoke God's mercy. They are April 25, the Major Rogation (or Greater Litanies), coinciding with St. Mark's Day; and the three days preceding Ascension Day, the Minor Rogations (or Lesser Litanies). These are indicated below in the main body of the calendar and in the Moveable Feasts section.

Before the reform of Pope St Pius X in 1911, ordinary Doubles took precedence over most of the semidouble Sundays, resulting in many of the Sunday Masses rarely being said. While retaining the semidouble rite for Sundays, the reform permitted only the most important feasts to be celebrated on Sunday, although commemorations were still made until the reform of 1960.

Moveable Feasts

The moveable feasts are those connected with the Easter cycle, and Easter is the date relative to which their position is ultimately determined. The date of Easter is determined relative to the lunar calendar as used by the Hebrews. The rule has since the Middle Ages been phrased as "Easter is observed on the Sunday after the first full moon on or after the day of the vernal equinox." However, this does not reflect the actual ecclesiastical rules precisely. One reason for this is that the full moon involved (called the Paschal full moon) is not an astronomical full moon, but an ecclesiastical moon. Another difference is that the astronomical vernal equinox is a natural astronomical phenomenon, which can fall on 20 or 21 March, while the ecclesiastical vernal equinox is a fixed March 21 (on the Gregorian Calendar). Easter is determined from tables which determine Easter based on the ecclesiastical rules described above, which do not always coincide with the astronomical full moon. The moveable feasts are given below:

Septuagesima Sunday (9th Sunday before Easter)
Ash Wednesday (Wednesday after the 7th Sunday before Easter)
Passion Sunday (Sunday 2 weeks before Easter)
Feast of the Sorrows of the Virgin Mary (Thursday after 2nd Sunday before Easter)
Palm Sunday (Sunday a week before Easter)
Holy Thursday (Thursday before Easter)
Good Friday (Friday before Easter)
Holy Saturday (Saturday before Easter)
Easter Sunday, the Solemnity of Solemnities, the Resurrection of Our Lord Jesus Christ
